

<http://www.rechargenews.com/hardcopy/article199461.ece>

Nanotubular belles

A breakthrough development in photovoltaic (PV) cell nanotechnology at the US Department of Energy's Argonne National Laboratory (ANL) has scientists looking forward to the possibility of manufacturing solar panels that generate electricity more cheaply and more efficiently than the present crop of conventional crystalline silicon (cSi) or cadmium telluride PV cells.

Read complete article with online subscription at URL above.